

HRIC STATUS UPDATE – 2008-08-14

It is an exciting time for the Libin Cardiovascular Institute of Alberta. Construction work is full steam ahead on completing the Health Research Innovation Centre (HRIC) ground floor fit-out. With year-end 2008 as the completion target, there is much activity, and the best part for those who will be housed in this space in the near future is that progress is visible from the HRIC atrium. At present, the framing is up, and so visualizing the spaces and labs for our scientists is becoming easier.

Visitors to the Health Research Innovation Centre on the University of Calgary's South Campus (the FMC campus) will now be welcomed by a recently installed Libin Cardiovascular Institute sign!

The Institute's Research Director, Jonathan Lytton (centre), in his future lab, going over details with Cohos Evamy and Duke Projects representatives.
