

HRIC STATUS UPDATE – 2008-09-08

Construction teams continue to work at a torrid pace to deliver the new Libin Cardiovascular Institute of Alberta labs on the first floor of the Health Research Innovation Centre (HRIC). Since the last update three weeks ago, many of the spaces now have utility infrastructure, insulation and drywall installed in-between and on the framing. Jonathan Lytton, our Research Director, has been keeping tabs on the work, including regular meetings with the project team to ensure the spaces resulting are customized per the researchers' specifications.

Atrium of the Health Research Innovation Centre provides an inspirational bright open space. With vast skylights and an architecturally and artistically unique structure, the atrium connects HRIC to the Health Sciences and Heritage Research buildings.

A graffiti artist planning his next masterpiece? Actually it is Don Welsh of the Libin Institute's Smooth Muscle Research Group, planning his next scientific discovery in the new LCIA HRIC Labs. Caught ya'!
